

I'm writing to officially voice my concern that XM radio's Traffic and Weather service is being threatened by local radio stations and congress. Although this service is yet to be offered in the Atlanta area where I live, premium services like these are why I pay for satellite radio. Traditional AM/FM stations bombard me with commercials, corporate produced playlists and nonsense from on air personalities.

In addition, instant traffic data can assist motorists from making that final turn into a traffic disaster, thus reducing congestion in metro areas.

I need satellite radio to flourish and grow. It is my choice to pay, and these advanced services are why I pay.
